With over a decade of multidisciplinary experience spanning academia, research, and community engagement across several countries, I bring a distinctive blend of scholarly rigor, pedagogical innovation, and inclusive leadership aligned with the evolving priorities of responsible management education and human-centered artificial intelligence (AI) applications that enhance decision-making, productivity, and organizational sustainability.

I hold a Ph.D. in Management from the University of Hull, UK (AACSB and AMBA accredited), and I am currently pursuing an Ed.D. in Adult Learning and Higher Education at Oregon State University, USA. My professional certifications -including Senior Certified Professional (SCP) - Society of Human Resource Management, Certified Global Diversity, Equity, Inclusion HR Manager (CDEI™) - Chartered Institute of Professional Certifications, and Artificial Intelligence for HR - Future Workplace, reflect my commitment to bridging academic learning with industry practice and advancing leadership grounded in empathy, analytics, and innovation through the mindful use of AI technologies in people-centric contexts.

With over ten years of teaching experience in Organizational Behavior Management and Human Resource Management, I have consistently sought to inspire learners to connect management theory to practice. My teaching portfolio includes leadership and organizational behavior, diversity management, strategic HRM, and more with growing emphasis on AI-enabled decision-making and human-centred AI adoption in organizational settings. This commitment to student-centered teaching was recognized early in my career through the Best Teacher Award \(Students' Choice\) at Abasyn University \(2012\).

My research and academic leadership are anchored in sustainability and social responsibility, core to contemporary OB and HRM discourse. As Deputy Dean of the College of Business at Al Ain University (UAE) and former Acting Chair of Management at A'Sharqiyah University (Oman), I have led curriculum reforms embedding AI in HRM, Sustainability Development Goals (SDGs) across the business programs, and aligned BBA HRM curriculum with Society of Human Resource Management (SHRM). As a Certified Carbon Literate Educator (PRME & University of Nottingham), I incorporate sustainability-oriented thinking into both classroom teaching and college strategy. I also launched the Women Leadership Forum in our college, advancing inclusive leadership pipelines aligned with SDGs 5, 8, and 10. My community engagement initiatives at Al Ain University bagged me Dean's award for Community Engagement in 2021.

As a UN PRME signatory, I actively contribute to global responsible management education initiatives. My work and leadership journey have been featured by PRME, which published my professional story highlighting my contributions to sustainability education, youth engagement, and inclusive leadership (Available here). Additionally, my perspectives on leadership, equity, and purpose-driven careers were featured in an interview published by Authority Magazine (Available here). These platforms reflect my commitment to translating academic expertise into broader societal impact.

My scholarly contributions include Scopus, ABDC, ABS, and Web of Science indexed publications, edited books, and book chapters addressing leadership and organizational behaviour, responsible HRM, human-centered AI, and equity-based learning. I also maintain active collaborations between academia and practice, including consultancy projects recognized by the Oman Chamber of Commerce & Industry Award \(2016\). My academic philosophy centers on cultivating purpose-driven, emotionally intelligent, and analytically capable leaders of tomorrow.
